

John White has been an RCMP member since 1988. He has worked in operational federal policing roles within “O” division (Ontario), primarily in the areas of drug enforcement and criminal intelligence. He has served on the Mounted Police Association of Ontario (MPAO) executive board since 1998, and was elected president in November, 2013.

He graduated from Memorial University of Newfoundland in 1986 with conjoint Bachelors of Arts and Education degrees (majoring in English, history and education). As the MPAO president, he sits as a director of the Canadian Police Association (CPA), advocating on behalf of police-related legislation and policy, and furthering relationships with parliamentarians from all political affiliations. He is one of a group of association leaders from Ontario and British Columbia who pursued the Supreme Court challenge beginning in 2006.

He is committed to supporting the creation of a national labour organization, advocating for improved working conditions for our members, and policing partners everywhere. He lives in Kitchener, Ontario.
